

15 Jobs in the Healthcare Field that Use Technology (there's more!)

Biomedical Engineer: Designs and maintains medical equipment, such as prosthetics and imaging devices. Average salary: $92,000.

Clinical Data Analyst: Collects and interprets data to help improve clinical practices and patient outcomes. Average salary: $67,000.

Clinical Systems Analyst: Develops and supports software systems used in patient care and hospital management. Average salary: $84,000.

Digital Health Strategist: Develops strategies for implementing digital health technologies in healthcare organizations. Average salary: $110,000.

EHR Implementation Specialist: Works with hospitals and clinics to implement electronic health record systems. Average salary: $85,000.

Genomics Technician: Uses technology to study and interpret genetic data for medical research. Average salary: $61,000.

Health Informatics Specialist: Manages and analyzes patient data to improve healthcare delivery. Average salary: $73,000.

Health Information Manager: Manages patient records and ensures data privacy and compliance with regulations. Average salary: $72,000.

Health IT Project Manager: Oversees the implementation of technology projects in healthcare settings. Average salary: $98,000.

Medical Imaging Specialist: Operates imaging equipment like MRIs and CT scans to diagnose diseases. Average salary: $76,000.

Medical Lab Technician: Performs tests using advanced lab equipment to diagnose diseases. Average salary: $54,000.

Nurse: Utilizes various healthcare technologies, such as electronic health records and telehealth tools, to provide patient care. Average salary: $77,000.

Radiologic Technologist: Uses X-rays, MRIs, and CT scans to help diagnose patient conditions. Average salary: $61,900.

Telemedicine Physician: Provides remote healthcare services via video or phone consultations. Average salary: $210,000.

Virtual Health Coach: Provides remote wellness and health coaching via digital platforms. Average salary: $55,000.

